Restraining Order Solutions

A device and service that provides clients proof of their whereabouts

Restraining Order Violation or wrongly accused?

In addition to fighting for victim's safety, we know there are times when an individual is wrongly accused.

When there is no real basis of domestic violence issues, we may install a tracking device on the person who was issued a restraining order. This will prove or disprove our client's location at the time of an accusation.

On occasion, an estranged, spouse or partner will ask for and receive a restraining order from the Court. The order may include a GPS device. However, when wrongly accused, the restrained person can opt to equip themselves with a GPS tracking device which factors the accuser's home and employment stay-away zones. Later, during a hearing for contempt, or; to make the order permanent, GPS data provides the Court accurate information to assist in determining an impartial decision.

If you are being monitored with one of our devices, we can prepare a report for the court and your attorney with complete location details.

GPS data provides the courts the proof you need to fight false allegations.

Case history

Client A was issued a Temporary Restraining Order upon testimony provided to the court by his former wife who accused him of stalking her and other family members. She provided the specific times and dates.

Client cleverly chose to equip himself with a GPS Monitoring device on the day he was served with the temporary order. He did not mention this to anyone.

On the day of the court hearing our client provided rebuttal information from GPS Monitoring Solutions, which clearly showed he was not near his former wife or her family members.

The court dismissed all charges. Our client was delighted he'd utilized our low-cost, effective method to counter the charges made by his former wife.
